Building on best practice responses to

Domestic and Family Violence

Learning that 'resistance' is a 'response' to violence, not an 'effect' of the impact of violence. A victim's resistance is an essential part of the evidential fact pattern.

In recognition of the important and valuable role of Police in response to Domestic and Family Violence, the NSW Police Domestic Violence Team has established a 12 month pilot project. The project is an initiative of the NSW Police Domestic Violence Team collaboration with Domestic Violence Service Management - Sightlines.

Creating Conversations Masterclass

The NSW Police Domestic and Family Violence Practice Working Group for this pilot project invites you to attend the Creating Conversations Masterclass day to

1. further develop your awareness and deepen your understanding of police work in response to Domestic and Family Violence
2. offer you the opportunity to learn and reflect with police colleagues on how you conceptualise and process evidence thinking

Featuring international keynotes Dr Linda Coates and Dr Allan Wade from the Centre for Response-Based Practice, Canada. Take a deeper dive in the ideas developed and hosted on Insight Exchange.
