Launch of Support My Economic Safety: A guide for organisations thinking about how to address economic abuse

This week, Insight Exchange and Centre for Women's Economic Safety have released a new resource for organisations thinking about how to address economic abuse. See our launch video, below, featuring the Hon. Mark Speakman MP, NSW Attorney General and Minister for the Prevention of Domestic and Sexual Violence, Suzanne Evans, CFO First Sentier Investors (and board member DVSM); Dom Thurbon, Partner EY Community Impact Practice and Human Rights advocate, Rabia Siddique.

We know from Australian Institute of Health and Welfare data that the majority of people experiencing abuse do not contact police or specialist domestic and family violence services but most, in the course of their day-to-day life, will be in touch with a range of businesses, organisations and institutions, either as a customer or an employee.

As a result, these organisations have a significant part to play in addressing economic abuse. Better design and better responses, earlier, from a wider range of organisations could help build safety and improve options for victim-survivors.

Support My Economic Safety is a tool to guide organisations in reflection and action on how to be part of the solution rather than the problem.

Everyone has a part to play in responding to domestic and family violence and economic abuse. We invite you to share this Update with people you think might be interested and share our social media content on Vimeo | LinkedIn
