“

...There's a confidence that when I'm informed by this material I'm not only more likely to respond well, I'm also actively working to dismantle unhelpful ideologies and approaches that stand between victim-survivors and the support they need.

I'm also holding users of violence to account more broadly by not contributing to systems, language or responses that keep them out of view....

Session Facilitator

Luke Addinsall
Insight Exchange Associate

Luke is a Qualified and accredited Mental Health Social Worker and Counsellor with extensive experience in working with men who use violence. He has worked for over 20 years in the social sector across Government departments, specialist services, private practice, and as a consultant and individual and group supervisor.

Luke's practice has primarily involved working with men in counselling and in men's group programs. He's recently completed his term as co-chair of the NSW Men's Behaviour Change Network. He has also engaged as a Specialist Consultant, as a member of No to Violence' NSW Expert Panel for Men's Behaviour Change and member of the DVNSW Policy and Advisory Committee as a specialist in working with men who use violence.

Prior to starting with Insight Exchange Luke was the manager of the Men & Family Centre. An organisation that specialises in collaborative, respectful whole-of-family responses to domestic and family violence.
